Driving a car is an important skill that requires focus, responsibility, and respect for the rules. Traffic laws are designed to keep drivers, passengers, and pedestrians safe. In every country, there are signs, speed limits, and rules about seat belts and mobile phone use while driving. Following these rules helps reduce accidents and makes the roads safer for everyone.

Different countries have different driving cultures. For example, in the United States, drivers usually stop at stop signs even when the road is empty. In contrast, in some European countries, drivers often yield to other vehicles even if they have the right way. In Saudi Arabia, drivers are known for being fast and sometimes impatient, so it is very important to pay attention and stay calm.
